

*Saving
Springton*

Paul McElwee

Hidden deep inside a huge oak tree, four giant lands representing each of the seasons live in harmony. They are called the Season Islands. There is Winterville, Springton, Summer City and Autumn Falls. They surround the terrifying Savage Sea where the Stormclouds live; it's a horrible, unpleasant place, from where the Stormclouds cause havoc wherever they can. In the first of our adventures to the Season Islands, we'll explore a magical land where it's Spring all year round and its name is Springton.

Springton is a much warmer place. Larger than ten football fields, it's the place where things come to life, like a city set in a huge valley. Springton is split into various sections; the Flower Bed, the Bird Sanctuary and the Paddock. The Flower Bed is the biggest area of Springton, and among the green grass, the bed is a rainbow of colour; crocuses, lilies, roses, daisies, primroses, lilac's and rhododendrons (along with every other flower) are everywhere to be seen. Each type of flower had their own space in the vast expanse of Springton and from the air, it looked like a giant and beautiful patchwork quilt of petals.

The city of Springton had the right amount of sunlight, warmth and rain to make sure that no covering was ever needed. Life was simple here; everything was provided. The work was mostly farming. Each type of flower was responsible for their own area; keeping it tidy and clean by mowing the grass around them if it got too long, ensuring that young flowers stayed out of mischief and preparing ground for flowers as they began to sprout up. Everyone got on with each other. Our story begins in the
